Adsorption and storage of sulfite were investigated by activated carbons prepared from sugarcane bagasse (SCB) and palm kernel shell (PKS) using the batch equilibrium technique. The adsorption behavior of sulfite was investigated by using the Langmuir model, and the results indicated that the SCB-900-10 and PKS-900-10 adsorbents were the most suitable for sulfite removal, with the respective monolayer capacities of 310.6 and 201.9 mg/g at 303 K, and the adsorption affinities of 4.11 and 3.48 mmol/g. The SCB-900-10 and PKS-900-10 adsorbents could reach complete adsorption equilibrium of sulfite after 120 min of contact time. Thermodynamic parameters revealed that the adsorption was a spontaneous and endothermic process. Desorption of sulfite was carried out at 303 K, and the results indicated that the desorption capacities of SCB 4bc0debe42
